Inzad, artifact 2000.135.1.1
The inzad has one string and is played with a bow. Several variants of this instrument can be found in West Africa, especially in Islamized countries. It is made from half a calabash, which serves as a resonator, to which the skin of a goat is nailed. A circular opening is cut in the skin. The string, made of horsehair, is attached to the neck and held in place by two strips of leather.
